

Kristen Mazzocchi

Kristen Mazzocchi is an experienced arts educator, director and production manager. After graduating from Boston College with a BA in Theatre and Economics, she began her career at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts (now the Boch Center) in the Education Department. She went on to work as Production Manager for the Celebrity Series of Boston where she also served as Operations Director of AileyCamp Boston, a summer dance camp for middle school aged students from the Boston Public School system.

Kristen's passion for education inspired her to earn a master's degree in Arts Education from Harvard University, and then to take a position as the Director of Educational Programs for The Celebrity Series of Boston including co-directing Aileycamp with Shaumba-Yandje Dibinga. Kristen has been a freelance teaching artist, director and production manager working with many schools and arts organizations including Babson College, Commonwealth Shakespeare Company, New England Conservatory of Music, Improv Asylum and Needham Public Schools and is currently the Theater Teacher and Director at Needham High School.